TRUST

The global market for Kosher-certified food is currently estimated to be worth around USD 200 billion a year. Kosher certification offered by SGS, in partnership with KosherCheck, confirms your products are authentically Kosher, enabling you to build trust with customers while increasing your share of this expanding market.

GLOBAL MARKET FOR KOSHER FOOD

There are currently over one million food products bearing the Kosher symbol being offered to consumers around the world. This global market has seen 15% annual growth in recent years, a trend that is set to continue.

Trust is an important part of succeeding in this global market. Consumers must be certain the products they eat are genuinely Kosher. To achieve this level of trust in a global context, Kosher certification must be practical to implement, globally understood, and recognized by authorities and consumers. Kosher certification must also clearly exhibit the same standards for quality and safety as other internationally recognized food safety schemes.

SGS KOSHER CERTIFICATION: A 4-STEP APPROACH

STEP 1
Contact your local SGS office. SGS will send you an application form to complete to define the scope of the certification and provide you with an accurate proposal to cover the annual certification and license fees. There are no costs associated with completing this application form

STEP 2
Discuss your requirements with SGS and ensure your facility is prepared for the onsite audit. A gap audit and in-house training can be organized with qualified Kosher Check (KC) auditors to ensure you are fully prepared before the on-site audit
